Art Unit: 3724

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1,6 and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Todisco in view of Stein et al. and Cronberger.

Todisco et al. shows a buffer plate (50 plus plate above it) having a groove with an elastic member (60) and plurality of pins (30) sticking thru a guide plate (plate below the buffer plate).

Todisco teaches a separate elastic member (60) for each pin, as opposed to one elastic member contacting plural pins.

However, it is well known for plural pins to be biased by a single elastic member. For example, from the field of scoring is Stein, who shows both scoring pins (218) extending thru guide holes (246A,247A) in a guide plate and biased by the same elastic member (246C,246D,247D see figure 8). Another example is Cronberger, who shows plural pins (2) extending thru guide holes (figure 3) in a guide plate and biased by the same elastic member (4). The function of all of these devices is the same, namely to provide a resilient backing for the pins such that all of their working points can be coplanar. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have made Todisco's groove accommodate a single elastic element that contacted all of the pins, as suggested by Stein and Cronberger, since it has been shown to be an art-recognized equivalent known for the same purpose.

Todisco, as modified above, shows all of the recited limitations except the resilient member is made of one piece rather than two. However, the courts have ruled that "the unity or diversity of parts would depend more on the choice of the manufacturer...than on any inventive concept" In re Lockhart, 90 USPQ 214. In this case, there appears to be no inventive concept to make it out of one piece or two. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have made the resilient member out of two pieces, as a simple manufacturing choice.

Todisco obviously must have some sort of "fixation member" for supporting the buffer plate, but Todisco does not mention a grooved fixation member. The Examiner takes Official Notice that it is well known to hold a tool using a grooved fixation member, as broadly claimed. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have modified Todisco by providing a grooved fixation member, as is well known, in order to hold the tool.

3. Claim 2 is allowed.

4. Applicant's arguments have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.
Applicant has overcome the objection to the disclosure.

Applicant's amendment to the claims has successfully overcome the prior art rejection under 35 USC 102 by Todisco, but a somewhat different rejection under 35 USC 103 is now applicable, as set forth above.

5. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
